LEGO DINO ATTACK

Building Challenge

WINNERS!

We asked LEGO BrickMasters to send us their ideas for vehicles and equipment the Dino Attack team could use against the rampaging dinosaurs – and did you ever respond! The five pictured on these pages were chosen as the very best of the thousands of entries we received. Congratulations to all the winners! ■

Inside the T-1 TYPHOON

The T-1 Typhoon Anti-Rex Helicopter was built to take down even the biggest and nastiest city-stomping dinosaurs. With its powerful armor and an arsenal of anti-dino hardware, this high-speed air vehicle may be our best hope of stopping the dino menace once and for all. ■

WHERE THE BATTLE BEGINS!

HECTIC Holidays!

This is Captain James of the USS Ocean Odyssey. It has been four months since dinosaurs appeared in the city and the battle began to drive them out.

Looks like the construction crews are busy. But what's that they're doing?

The Rockfish has orders to monitor the battle as well as the rebuilding efforts. Over and out!

Great! Now that the dinos are driven off, the city can have some holiday spirit again!

Look out!

I think they are being driven off in this direction!

Well, at least it's

LEGO® House Shines at BrickFest 2005

If you thought only kids built with LEGO bricks, think again! Every year, thousands of adult Fans, commonly called AFOLs (Adult Fans of LEGO) come together for the LEGO BrickFest to showcase their LEGO creations.

This year from August 12th to August 14th, about 350 AFOLs from all around the world gathered in Arlington, Virginia for BrickFest 2005! In addition to the builders themselves, several thousand spectators and LEGO enthusiasts also came to catch a glimpse of the giant LEGO creations. One of the models that caught our attention was a model built by LEGO enthusiast and second-time BrickFest attendee, Janey Cook, aka "Janey Red Brick." Janey came all the way from Chelsey, Ontario Canada to exhibit her impressive model at BrickFest and we're very glad she did!

The model entitled "Beacon Hill" is a 12-room house, with everything from a kitchen to a game room and measures about 2 ½ feet high and 3 ¼ feet long! It's made out of pieces from various LEGO themes, like Fabuland, Scala, Belville, and Homemaker series that Janey says she collected for years from countries all over the world! It took Janey about a year to build Beacon Hill and, according to her, it's not even finished! Now that's years of LEGO devotion!

"I plan to develop the roof top into a patio with furniture and flower gardens as well as add an entire basement floor which will have a garage including a retro styled Recreation Room with items such as orange couches, paneled bar and a disco ball. In addition to that, full hillside landscaping so the dollhouse eventually lives up to its name 'Beacon Hill,'" said Ms. Cook. "I am contemplating the idea of lighting the entire house, as well."

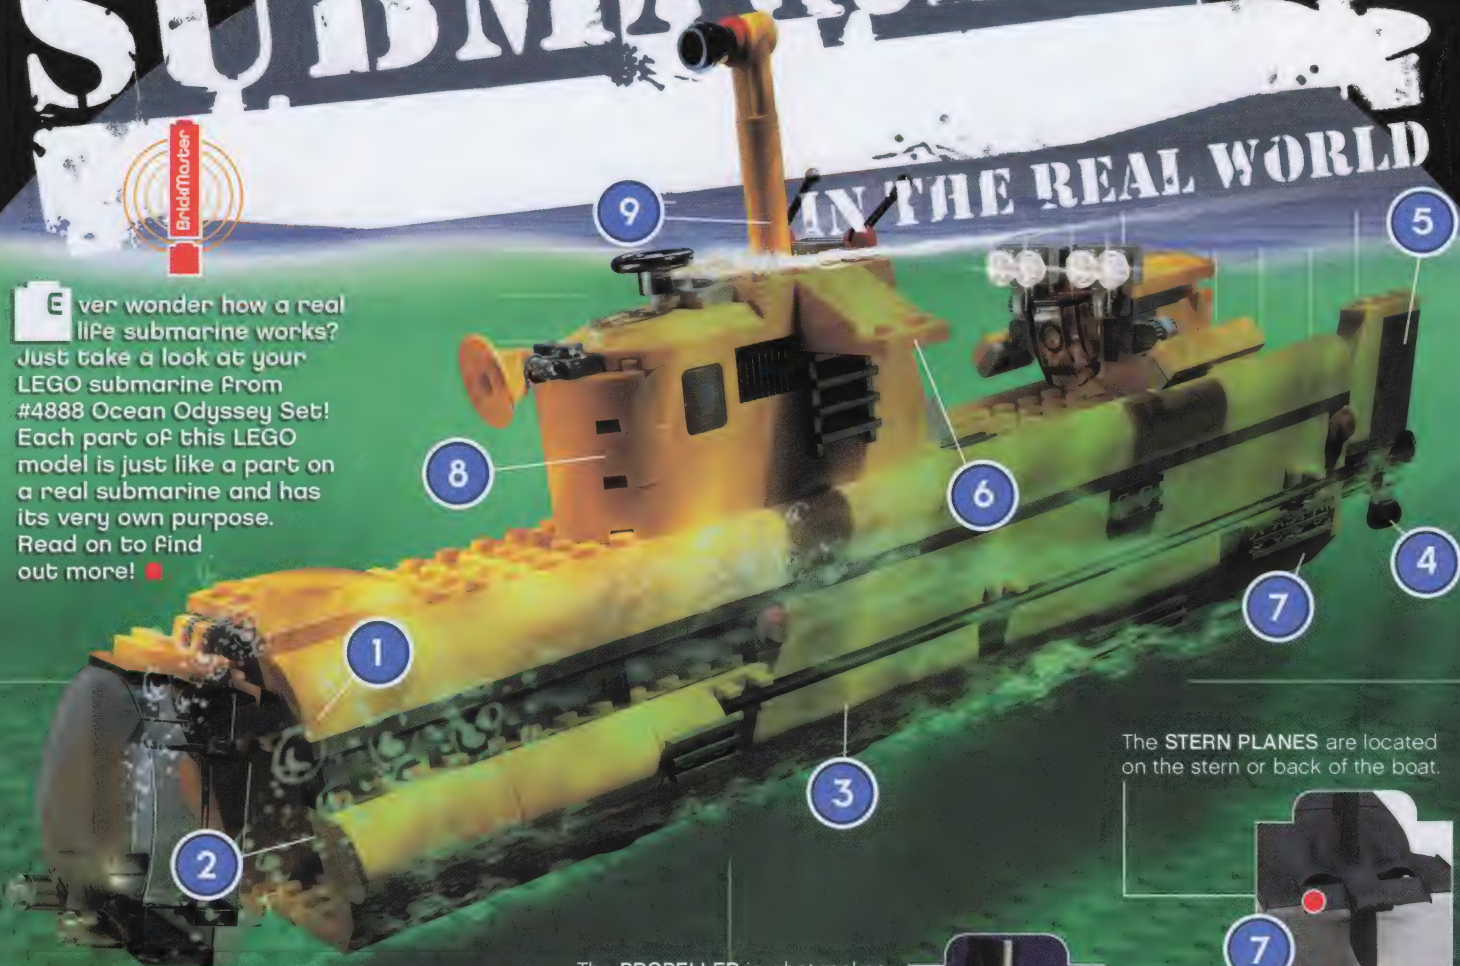

Each room in the house is 32 studs wide by 32 studs deep (approximately 10" sq.) and each floor is approximately 20 bricks high. Modular rooms are connected using TECHNIC pins and bricks. ■

SUBMARINES

Ever wonder how a real life submarine works? Just take a look at your LEGO submarine from #4888 Ocean Odyssey Set! Each part of this LEGO model is just like a part on a real submarine and has its very own purpose. Read on to find out more! ■

A submarine has two layers, the inner hull and the outer hull.

The OUTER HULL is in a cylindrical shape, which makes it easier for the submarine to maneuver and accelerate.

The INNER HULL is the interior layer of a submarine. It protects the crew from the pressure and cold temperature of the water.

Between the inner hull and outer hull are the BALLAST TANKS. The ballast tanks allow a submarine to float. When a submarine wants to sink, the ballast tanks are filled with water. When a submarine wants to float, the ballast tanks are emptied.

The PROPELLER is what makes a submarine move forward through the water. It is usually powered by nuclear energy or diesel fuel.

The RUDDER works a lot like a shark's tail. It allows the submarine to turn from side to side.

Two sets of diving plans allow the submarine to go up and down, the stern planes and the sail planes.

The SAIL PLANES are located on the sail.

The STERN PLANES are located on the stern or back of the boat.

The SAIL looks like a shark fin on top of the submarine. Stored inside of the sail are the periscope and radio antenna.

The PERISCOPE is like the submarine's eye. It allows the submarine to see what is happening on the surface by rising above water, while the sub stays under water. The periscope is made with mirrors and lenses that reflect and bend images down a long tube to the eye of a sailor inside.

Build your own submarine using #4888 Ocean Odyssey Set!

GOBLET OF FIRE

THE DURMSTRANG SHIP ON THE BIG SCREEN!
EXCLUSIVE BEHIND-THE-SCENES MOVIE FACTS

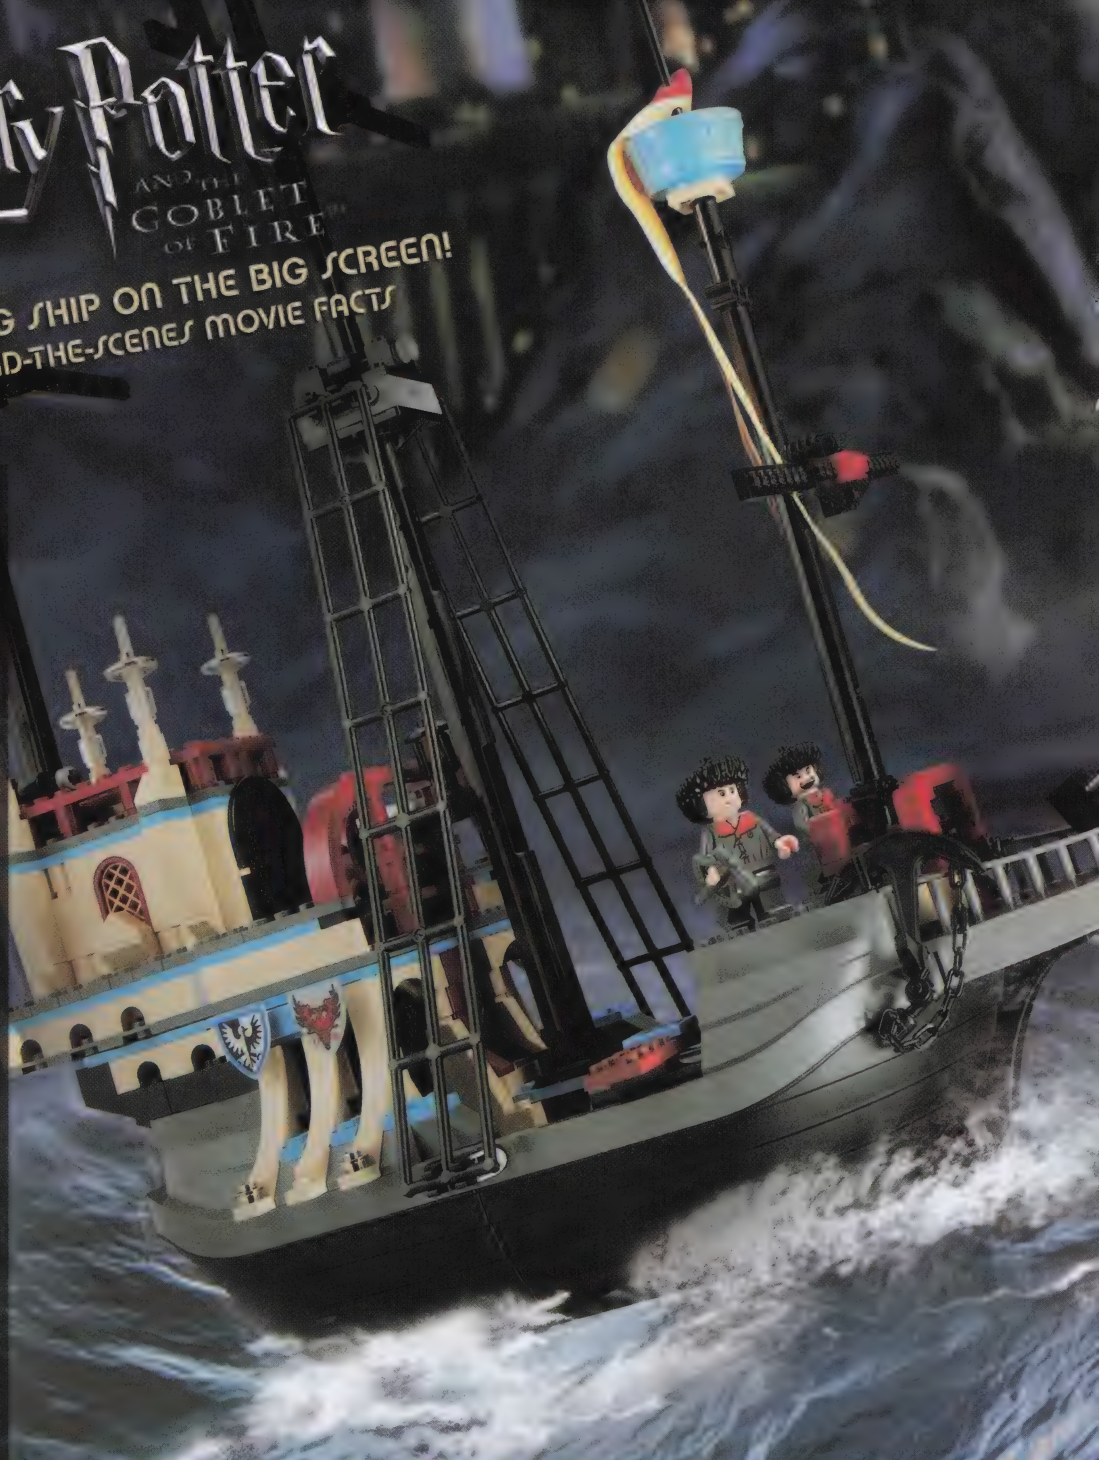

The Triwizard Tournament is about to begin when a mysterious ship rises from the lake near Hogwarts Castle. The flags on the ship make it clear that the Durmstrang Institute has arrived!

If you thought the LEGO Harry Potter Durmstrang Ship was big, you won't believe this! The ship seen in Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire is approximately 85 feet long!

The only part of the ship that was actually built for the movie was the tip of the bow with the figurehead. The rest of the ship that you see on the screen is completely computer generated. You could never tell, though! That's because the people in charge of the film's special effects worked for 7 months to make The Durmstrang Ship look real enough to set sail.

Speaking of real ships...does The Durmstrang Ship look like any other ship you've seen before? Here's a hint: Christopher Columbus. That's right! The Durmstrang ship was actually modeled after the Santa Maria, the ship on which Christopher Columbus was sailing when he found America in 1492!

Now that you know all about The Durmstrang Ship, you can build one of your own. Drop anchor and come aboard the surprise-filled Durmstrang Ship from the LEGO Harry Potter collection! Take a tour with Professor Karkaroff and Viktor Krum, Harry's newest rival for the Triwizard Cup. At an impressive 21 inches tall and 20 inches long, there's no telling what you might find on the ship! 🚢

In 2002, Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones hit theaters around the world – and how would those clones have ever attacked without their trusty Republic Gunships to carry them around? In hindsight, maybe that wasn't such a good idea...

4504 Millennium Falcon™

In 2004, an all-new Millennium Falcon rocketed into hyperspace, more detailed and realistic than ever before. And even better, it included a certain gold protocol droid who some say is the real hero of the Star Wars saga!

4484 MINI X-wing Fighter & TIE Advanced

Ever wish you could bring a starship to school with you? In 2003, you were in luck thanks to the pocket-sized MINI vehicle collection! No Wookiee would be seen without them.

Interview with LEGO® Group Owner Kjeld Kirk Kristiansen!

In celebration of the 50th Anniversary of the LEGO® System of Play, we recently sat down with Kjeld Kirk Kristiansen, the company owner and grandson of Founder Ole Kirk Christiansen. Here's what he had to say about the amazing event!

P- Kjeld, you were just seven years old when Town Plan [the first LEGO System set] was introduced. Tell us about those sets and what they allowed you to do differently from other LEGO toys.

H- When Town Plan came on the market, it gave us a selection of new bricks. It meant that we could build houses that looked like real houses! I remember the service station in particular. With the Town Plan we used the streets to play traffic and road-safety games.

P- What kinds of things did you like to build? Do you remember a favorite model?

H- I built a lot of things – from a very young age. I especially loved building ships. I had a book called Royal Navy Vessels, and I tried building the ships that were pictured in the book. When NASA began sending rockets into space, I built tall rockets and launch pads. Once – when I was about 9 or 10 years old – I built one of these models, and the LEGO sales manager in Denmark liked it so much that it was used at an exhibition. I spent a lot of time building, and I was delighted every time an exciting addition was made to the LEGO range – like trains and electric motors.

Fifty years ago, Town Plan pioneered the LEGO system of building

My dad let me have my own desk in the department where the designers worked and developed new LEGO models. A number of the things I built actually became LEGO sets – I can remember that one of them was a small Jeep.

P- Why do you think LEGO building has been so popular and so loved for 50 years?

H- Because it encourages us to create things and be proud of the results! It's interesting and fun – whether you're building from your imagination or following a set of building instructions. If you follow building instructions, you learn new building tricks and you sometimes get ideas of your own for new models.

P- How has the LEGO System changed in the last 50 years?

H- The basic idea is the same, but in the beginning there weren't so many different kinds of bricks. Over the years the company has developed all kinds of new elements. I can remember the arrival of the wheel. That was a big day because it allowed you to build cars and other models that could move. Other additions over the years have included Town and Castle, and the Minifigure has also appeared on the scene, giving us new play options. We're actually one big family now – for example, LEGO DUPLO® and LEGO QUATRO® for the youngest and LEGO TECHNIC® and MINDSTORMS™ for the oldest children are like brothers, sisters and cousins in the family.

P- Kjeld, you are 57 years old now. Do you still build LEGO models?

H- You bet I do! I get one of each of all the new sets, and I build as many of those as I can find time to do. I still think it's fun and interesting – especially if they're a bit tricky to build! I've built all the Star Wars™ models, for example.

P- Which of the LEGO models from the 2005 range do you like best?

H- My favourite is the big Enzo Ferrari [#8653]. It's cool! But the smaller Enzo Ferrari [#8652] is pretty neat, too. ■

DINO ATTACK

DINOSAURS on the Loose!

In the world of DINO ATTACK, the dinosaurs are back, and they're mad! But these aren't your everyday dinosaurs. They're faster, stronger, and more powerful than any reptiles ever to walk the planet before!

IN OUR WORLD

Unless you count their bird descendants, dinosaurs have been extinct for 65 million years.

IN DINO ATTACK

Dinosaurs are back, and they're smashing cities all over the world! (Bet you've never seen a pelican do that!)

IN OUR WORLD

Many dinosaurs were peaceful herbivores, with teeth shaped for eating plants.

IN DINO ATTACK

Tofu dogs won't help you here – these sharp-toothed saurians are out for lunch!

MYSTERY OF THE LIVING DINOSAURS

Everybody's heard about sea monsters, swamp giants, and other strange creatures glimpsed in blurry photographs and old folktales around the world. Are dinosaurs still alive today?

Legend has it that a monster with a snake-like neck and four big fins prowls the waters of Scotland's Loch Ness. Could the Loch Ness Monster be a living dinosaur?

Doubt it.
The monster is supposed to look like a prehistoric reptile called Plesiosaurus...but Plesiosaurus wasn't a dinosaur! But is "Nessie" real at all? Hmm...we might need to build a submarine and check it out!

Deep in the swamps of the Republic of Congo lurks a monster the size of an elephant, with a long neck and a tail like a tree trunk...or so the stories say. Is Mokele-Mbembe a living descendant of giant dinosaurs like Apatosaurus and Brachiosaurus?

I dunno...
those dinosaurs didn't live in swamps or jungles, and it would be tough to keep something that big hidden for the 200 years that Mokele-Mbembe legends have been around. It'd be a nice break to meet a plant-eating dino for once, though!

IN OUR WORLD

Even if dinosaurs returned, they probably couldn't survive the bacteria, pollution and diseases of the modern day.

IN DINO ATTACK

Internal nuclear furnaces instantly sterilize anything a T-Rex chomps!

IN OUR WORLD

Dinosaurs were normal animals and no match for today's technology.

IN DINO ATTACK

Dinosaurs can bite through solid steel, blast lasers from their eyes, and breathe fire. Look out, human race!

I hear some scientists think T-Rex wasn't a very fast runner.

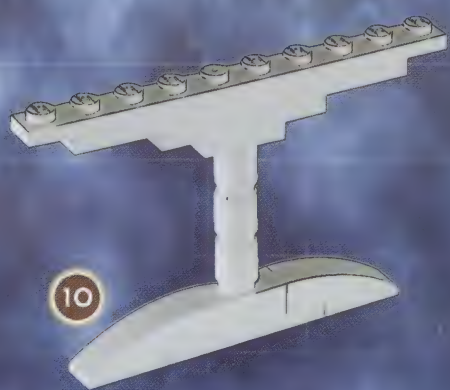

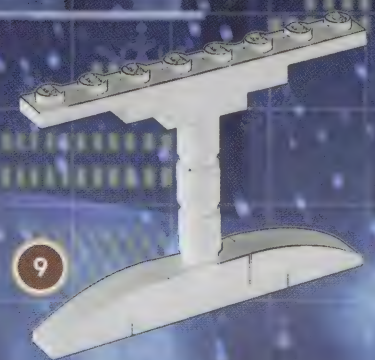

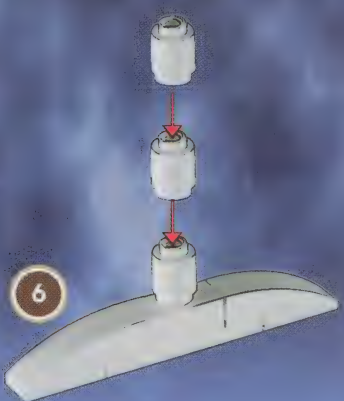

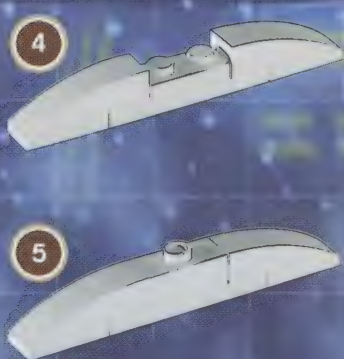

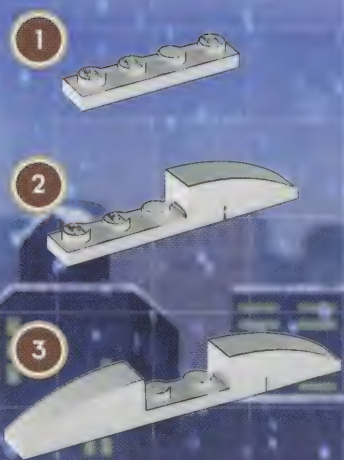

I wish somebody would tell HIM that!

TOWER OF TOA TRIVIA!

The original name for the Tower of Toa set was Tower of Visorak.

The Tower of Toa makes its first appearance in the BIONICLE story in BIONICLE Adventures #8: Challenge of the Hordika.

In the story, these towers are constructed of stone held together by Visorak web.

There are a number of these towers in Metru Nui, built as watch towers by the Visorak horde.

The tower's Rhotuka spinner generates Visorak web and binds targets on contact.

Join us at LEGOLAND for this one-of-a-kind event! On November 28th at 5:00pm, more than 245,000 forest green DUPLO bricks will click together to create a 30-foot tall holiday tree at LEGOLAND. Covered with more than 240 ornaments and 100 holiday candles, all built from LEGO basic brick, the LEGO brick tree will tower over The Beginning in the Park for the third year in a row!

There is only one place in the U.S. where you can find an entire Christmas tree made from LEGO bricks. LEGOLAND!

Ornaments Building at St. Nick's Brick Shop November 25 - 28

Get a head start on the holidays this year at the LEGOLAND special ornament building event. Stop by St. Nick's Brick Shop in The Beginning to participate in our festive Ornament Building November 25 – 28.

Choose from several styles of holiday themed Build and Buy ornament kits, enjoy live entertainment and maybe even meet a real Master Model Builder!

Kids' New Year's Eve December 31

6pm is Midnight at this kid exclusive bash, so bed time won't stop you from having fun! That's right! New Year's Eve parties aren't just for adults anymore! Join us on December 31 for our one-of-a-kind Kids' New Year's Eve Party.

The fun starts at 3 pm with entertainment in Miniland, followed by a concert with

Holiday Block Party December 17 - December 30

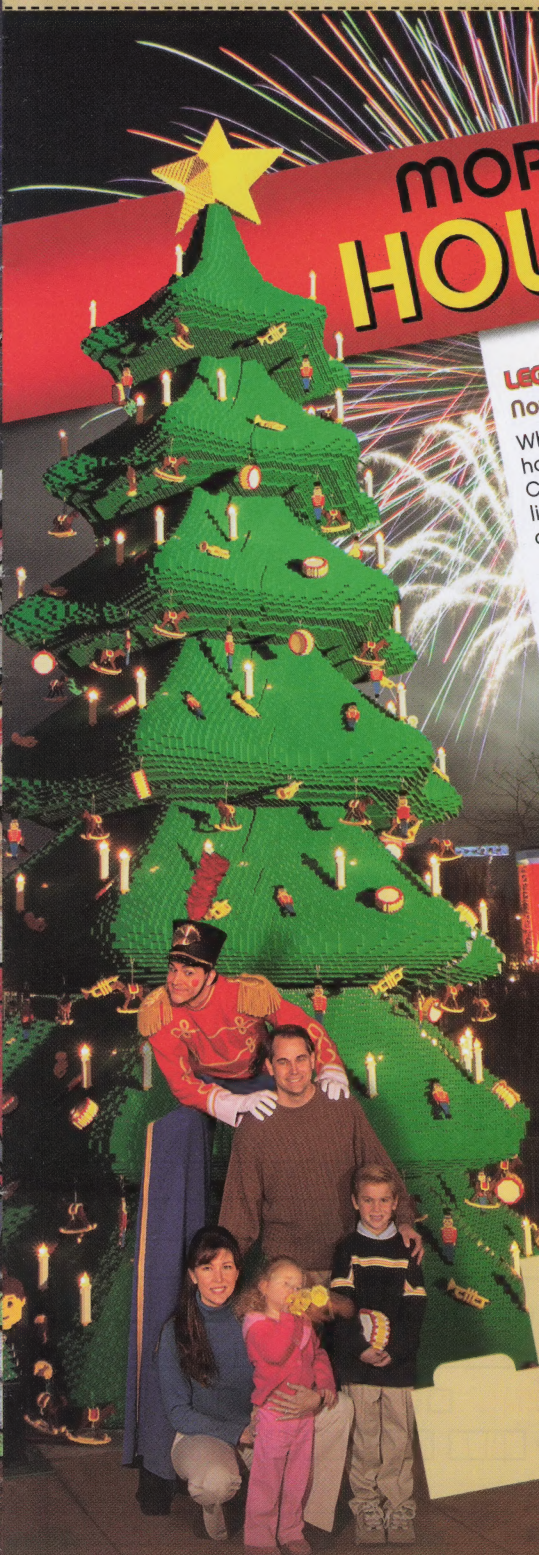

Come build Holiday memories during our 6th annual Holiday Block Party - December 17 through 30. The Park will be decked out with twinklin' lights, jolly music and a 30-foot LEGO Christmas tree.

There's even a life-sized Santa and reindeer built entirely from LEGO - perfect for that one-of-a-kind holiday photo. December 17 - 23: Join the Blizzard Building event where you can build your very own LEGO snowflake. December 23 - 30: Spread the cheer all day long and cap it off with a dazzling fireworks display at Park close over Miniland USA.

special guests at 4 pm.

Then at 5 pm join us for a rockin' year in review with high energy dance tunes!

Then at Midnight (6pm), watch the 22-foot-tall LEGO "Brick Drop" and ring in the New Year with a spectacular fireworks show complete with special fireworks viewing glasses. It's a New Year's you'll never forget!
